YOUR JOB As you read, circle any word or sentence that makes you stop. Reread it, then underline nearby words that help it make sense.

Life in Tide Pools

1. At low tide, rocky pools can hold sea stars, crabs, and small fish. The pools are called tide pools. Ocean water stays in them after the tide moves away, so the animals are still covered by water.

2. One animal in a tide pool is a sea anemone. It may look like a flower, but it is an animal. Its soft tentacles wave in the water. The tentacles can catch tiny animals for food.

3. People should look without touching. A wet rock may be slippery, and tide-pool animals can be harmed by rough hands. When the tide returns, the pools join the ocean again. The animals can move or float away.

2 ANSWER WITH EVIDENCE

Use the passage

1. Reread the first paragraph. In the sentence "Ocean water stays in them," what does "them" mean?

2. A reader says, "A sea anemone is a flower." Reread the second paragraph. What should the reader change that sentence to say?

3. You first think tide pools disappear when the tide returns. Reread the last paragraph. What do the pools do instead?

3 YOUR TURN

Your own words

Write two sentences about an animal. In one sentence, use one word that does not make sense on purpose. Reread silently or aloud, cross out that word, and write a word that makes sense. Then copy the corrected sentence on the last line.
