YOUR JOB Circle each capital letter and underline each period in the passage. These marks help you notice where every sentence begins and ends before you copy it.

Seeds at the Library

1. At the town library, a small wooden box holds seed packets. Families may take seeds to plant at home. In fall, they can save dry seeds and bring some back for other gardeners.

2. Each packet has a clear label. The label tells the plant name, such as basil or bean, and the year the seeds were packed. A careful label helps people choose what to grow.

3. Before planting, gardeners read the packet. They follow directions about sun, soil, and space. Then they write the plant name on a stick beside the row. This makes it easier to remember what is growing.
